What is Logistika

Logistika (Logistics) is intended especially for corporate management and professionals making decisions on systems and additional solutions for the movement of materials and goods, especially in shipping, industry and wholesale and other industries. It provides a comprehensive overview of the status, innovations and trends in logistics. It maps the current practise and development in shipping, warehousing, materials' handling, distribution and utilization of information technologies at home and abroad. It enables the manufacturers and providers of logistic services to present technical means, information and control technology and offers of transport, shipping and other logistic services. The magazine closely cooperates with the Czech Logistics Association and specialists from practise and universities.

The subscribers' service of the magazine includes a Czech information portal and an electronic newsletter, distributed to e-mail boxes of subscribers in PDF format.
